e Remarks Apply, to the Iron Bus-iness? The Paper-makers' combination is thus treated of by the New York Bulletin: The bination plan, in principle, whether t be to limit production or to build up a propoly, is but an artificial expedient to avert or prevent the natural readjustment of the new relations between supply and demand, necessitated by the changed conditions of the time; and like all artificial expedients to negative or to the operation of natural laws, nothing will come of it ultimately but disappointment. If, as stated at the conference, there are 960 mills making paer, when 460 are quite sufficient to supply the requirements of the trade, one night suppose but one inference is posible, namely, that there are 560 superuous mills, with capital locked up in them which ought to find its way to other keep them in operation, by makeshifts, is but another way of compelling consumers to pay for their product prices just so much above their natural level as is above 400. Or, to put it in another form, transferring to the consumer the penalty of over-production which properness to a point which is now confessed to be absurdly overdene. WM. G. BROWN,

Of Preston County—Letter From Him on the Financial Situation.

Protect County—Letter From Him on the Financial Situation.

There are grave questions now pending for the American people to settle; questions, the settlement of which will go far to fix the future of our Government and the character of our people. There is and always will be a dishonest element among men, that neither the influences of education or religion can correct, not the law with all its penalties suppress. This element to which I allopt is the purchase with their annuity. Of course, they do a great deal of the which they purchase with their annuity. Of course, they do a great deal of the cross-making themselves, and I have to be very strict in discountenancing the running up of bills, making it a rule to deduct from the year's income and yourns wind the character of our people. The element to which I allude is largely composed of the inactive and thriftless class of persons, and it is the peculiar province and vocation of the demangague to put mischief and hatred between them and their more industrious and better doing neighbors.

Owing to the depression of business.

A walk of 450 miles speaks well for the backers are and contained and the character of the depression of business.

A walk of 450 miles speaks well for the backers are and the formation exercised by the latter of the backers, and I have to be very strict in discountenancing the running up of bills, making it a rule to deduct from the year's income any sums while a supposable corresponding genus wasted at all the severing over at the end of the coming year is as follows: Two documents hors.

Owing to the depression of business for the last few years, the political demageogues have been more successful in their favorite work, and have gotten up a perfect hatred in the minds and passions of their followers, against what they call the bond-holders, bankers, millionaires and corporations, as they are familiary called in their choice vocabulary. Such has been their success that they have organized a formidable party, who demand that the Government shall break good faith with her creditors; and this is one of the great questions that is to be settled by the voters at the coming election. One of the special demands made is that the government shall issue between one and two billions of green backs and pay off the bond-holders, and stop; the interest oral feet. Now, in settling this question, it becomes important to see what a green-back, such as demanded, is; It is a promise to pay the amount expressed on its face. It bears no interest, and no time fixed for payment; or in other words, never to become due but to be worn out or pass off the stage of action at "doom's—lay," The bond which is to be paid off is a promise to pay a given sum, with interest half-yearly, till paid. What would be the opinion of the civilized world of a nation that would force such an outrage as that on her creditors? What would be the opinion of all honorable men of a debtor that would force her able men of a debtor that would force her weaker and defenceless creditor to make such an exchange? Nothing but unmatigated dishenor could follow such a transaction.

But who are the bond-holders that are to be thus treated? They or their as signors farnished their horses, bacon, flour, powder and fire-arms, indeed, all the sinews of war, and took bonds from the Government in return. Many of the officers and men took bonds for unpaid balances due for their services in the war. Can the Government, without everlasting infainty, break good faith with such creditors? But it is said the bonds have changed hands since they were given to those merhands since they were given to those mer-torious creditors— This may be true; but he Government encouraged the purchase the Government encouraged the purchase of her bonds by declaring that they should be paid to the holders in coin when due, or sooner, at the pleasure of the Government; so, a breach of good faith towards the assignees of such bonds would be no less fatal to the honor of the Government than if made with the original holders. The question, then, still occurs: Can the Government afford to be guilty of such bad faith towards the bond-holders, whether the original contractors or their essign.

The Legislature of Virginia, Iast winter passed a law in conflict with her engagement with, and to the prejudice of, her bond creditors, which the Judiciary of the latest proposed in the proposed in t State decided unconstitutional, roid. How far the Courts of the void. How far the Courts of the United States can go in remedying the evils of such legislation, is an open question. But would it not be well to look to all the consequences of the proposed legislation? Suppose Congress should pass a law such as is demanded by our greenback friends, and offer to pay a foreign bondholder in the new issue of greenbacks, can anybody suppose that he would surrender his bonds with the consequence of the consequence o suppose that he would surrender his bonds and take in exchange things with which he could not buy a dinner in London or Berlin? Would he not at once spurn the offer and ask relief under the well known

Barlin? Would he not at once spurra the Mr. Turpin's list is headed thus: "These are the times that try men's soils." Then follows the remark that the contributions are from the benevolent and kind-hearted of the North for the benefit of all sufferers "from the yellow fever in the South, independent of state, sect, color or religion."

The names of the contributors are as follows:

White the names of the contributors are as follows:

White names of the subject, and the proper religion the offer and apply at once to show Government for relief; and the eligit was refused to the English budgled was the law by which on once yearing the was freshed to the subject, and if the proper religions of the subject, and the goods, chattels and noneys of American merchants or citizens would be taken on the high seas, or any prof the Briti sued, the friends of the measure claimed the power to make them a legal tender as a war power. It is true that both individ-uals and nations can do under certain emergencies what would be unlawful un-der a different state of things. Even hom-icide can be justified in self defense; but homicide to satisfy an old grudge becomes murder; and a new promise to satisfy an old debt could hardly be justified by any, legal or moral code. 233 80 murrier; and a new promise to staryy an old debt could hardly be justified by any, legal or moral code.

I have thought the best way for those that want more money is to be more active and diligent in business, and get something to give in exchange for it. But if the inflationists want and must have more money, why resort to an increase of greenbacks, mere promises to pay at some distant and unknown day? Why not require the minuts to double or thribble their monthly issues of silver dollars? They are not promises that can be broken, they are dollars, and have purchasing power and an intrinsic value all over the commercial world. Paper money when it can be converted into silver or gold at the will of the holder at par, is very convenient, but promises to pay where the money cannot be had when called for, is and always must be an unsafe currency, because its value fluctuates with the credit of the maker.

commercial world is done on credit; hence it is very important for both nations and individuals to have and maintain a good name for honesty and integrity, without which they are poor indeed.

Титохупик, О., Sept. 2, 1878. I have recently made a little tour through the counties of Belmont, Harrison and Jeff erson, and thought I would make a brief note of some things that I noticed during that time.

First, our neighboring county of Bel mont is much ahead of us in good roads You find pikes extending in all different directions through the county, and the en tire community agree to the great advar-tage of such roads. As most of us are we aware, there are no direct or through road in our county, and why our people should always oppose the building of such roads is to be greatly wondered at. I visited the magnificent County Infirmary of Belmont for their poor unfortunates, which they should be proud of as a model of the kind. Mr. Danford is certainly the right man in the right place. Intelligent, energetic and kind, no better selection could have been line of the W. & T. V. R. R., through Flushing, Freeport and Tippecance. The people along the line look forward with great anxiety to the early completion of the road. It passes through a rich agricultural community, and no doubt when the road is finished it will add much to the business of the wholesale merchants at Wheeling and the wholesale merchants at Wheeling and Bridgeport.

It seems to be a general opinion through the county that the Hon. J. T. Updegraff will be our next Representative. Everywhere the people of his district feel condent of his ability and honesty to represent us; one who will make a faithful public servant.

Encouragement for the Feeble. So long as the falling embers of vitality are capable of being re-kindled into a warm and genial glow, just so long there is hope for the weak and emacinted invalid. Let him not, ne feminine palate, vegetable in a and thoroughly safe. Use it, and
